

New $crap for hottie & hockey ex

By JANON FISHER and KATHIANNE BONIELLO

Supermodel Carol Alt and former New York Rangers captain Ron Greschner divorced in 2001, but they fight like they're still married. Last week, the covergirl slapped the ex-hockey stud with a federal lawsuit in Manhattan, claiming he has refused to split $18 million he made from liquidating his stock in a Canadian water company, reneging on the terms of their separation, according to court papers. "This is a business matter," said Alt's attorney, Richard Roth. "Carol maintains that Ron failed to pay her."

The couple married in 1983, the year after Alt graced the cover of Sports Illustrated's annual swimsuit issue.

After 14 years, "unhappy and irreconcilable differences" caused the couple to separate in 1997, but they weren't legally divorced until March 2001, according to the suit.

Alt—a raw-food enthusiast, infomercial star and sometimes-actress—is now paired with former Islander Alexei Yashin, who is currently teamless after the remainder of his 10-year contract was bought out.
